

Comparative Economic Analysis In the War on Terror (quotes from)

“U.S. taxpayers pick-up half the tab when a Frenchman tops-off his tank.”

“U.S. taxpayers shell out $210 billion to subsidize imported oil – about $50 a barrel.”

“Cutting oil imports 10% is more potent than intercepting 10% of 200 incoming missiles.”

“Al Qaeda’s ‘Islam’ has no clothes: without Western dollars, it is nothing.”

“Petrodollars are al Qaeda’s center of gravity.”

“Not even Islamists believe al Qaeda will produce its way to dominance.”

“Economics is war by other means.”

“Indirectly, American motorists financed 911.”

“Ending oil imports castrates bin Laden’s plans.”

“Soccer moms worry about global warming and terrorism – and don’t like sending their kids to war.”

“Let’s pit a sharper weapon against al Qaeda’s primary weakness: its dependence on Western dollars.”

“Wind is competitive with $50 a barrel oil, but not $25 oil.”

“Oil subsidies may be the biggest barrier to defeating al Qaeda”

“The World is poised to spend $16 Trillion to increase energy production: much of it for refineries and pipelines.”

“Many OPEC countries face total collapse if the U.S. stops importing oil.”

“The U.S. Military is being transformed into an oil protection service.”

